COURSE CONTENT AND LEARNING OBJECTIVES

The key topic of this course is the United States in world affairs. We provide an overview and analysis of the influences, challenges, and opportunities of contemporary U.S. foreign policy. We examine the outstanding issues confronting U.S. foreign policy today, as well as the foreign policies of other key global actors in the foreseeable future. We systematically explore the forces that influence decisions among alternative policies and carefully outline the potential advantages and disadvantages of those alternatives. The major emphasis of the course is the analysis of alternative policy options available to the U.S. with the potential positive and/or negative outcomes associated with each alternative. This course examines the assumptions, theories, and concepts that shape U.S. policies overseas. We will study U.S. foreign policy in an international setting with an emphasis on the post-World War II and especially the post-Cold War periods. The diverse factors, national and global, influencing the position and actions of the United States in international society will be analyzed.

The course focuses on six aspects: (1) analytical perspectives and theoretical models of U.S. foreign policy, and domestic and external influences on foreign policy decisions; (2) the enduring and competing emphases in U.S. foreign policy: isolationism versus internationalism, unilateralism versus multilateralism, and interventionism versus non-interventionism; (3) challenges confronting American policymakers in key issue areas: military strategy, the proliferation of weapons of destruction, trade and investment policies, democracy and human rights, and the global environment; (4) challenges in key regions and countries with particular importance to U.S. security and well-being: Israel-Palestine, Islamic extremism and terrorism, Europe and NATO, and resurgent Russia; (5) the changing world order and U.S.-China relations; and (6) U.S. leadership in a changing world and the future of U.S. foreign policy.

By the end of the semester, you should have more critical thinking and a deep understanding of the following: (1) the effect of historical legacy on American foreign policy; (2) the vital connections between domestic and international affairs; (3) competing perspectives on the role of the United States in world affairs; (4) key issues and policy options confronting American policymakers, and (5) the changing nature of power in an increasingly interdependent world.
COURSE REQUIREMENT AND GRADING POLICY

You are expected to (1) complete and study carefully all required reading; (2) participate in class discussion on key issues, (3) prepare a critical review paper and a significant research paper; (4) present your papers to the class, and (5) follow current events and news analysis.

You will be evaluated on the basis of one critical review paper and presentation (10%), one research paper (20) and presentation (10%), one midterm exam (20%), two quizzes (20%), and active class participation including two written reports (20%). Attendance is required and students are strongly advised to complete the assigned readings for each class before attending that class meeting. If you don’t attend, you can’t participate in class discussion; if you don’t read assignments before attending class, you can’t participate intelligently. Attendance and participation count for 20% of the course grade.

The most significant assignment will be your independent research project. You must go beyond what other researchers have done and conduct an original analysis. The research paper should be a serious, substantial piece of independent research (10-12 pages, double-spaced). The topic is to be chosen by you, and you are encouraged to use this opportunity to investigate an issue in which you have substantial interest. You can come see me, or email me, as often as necessary to formulate a topic and discuss the progress of your research. The proposal should indicate what question you intend to address, why the question is significant or interesting, and how you intend to answer it. The preliminary list of sources should be a fairly comprehensive bibliography. The paper is expected to be a scholarly paper, with all that the phrase entails: footnotes, bibliography, a coherent structure, and familiarity with relevant literature. It is important to cite all sources accurately. For your paper references and citations, please carefully study and follow the “Department of Political Science Citation Guide” (available at http://polisci.cofc.edu). Although your final paper is due at the end of the semester, you will need to begin working on it immediately. Thus, there are a series of benchmarks throughout the semester to ensure that you make adequate progress. A one-page research paper proposal is due by Tuesday, January 23. A research proposal with annotated bibliography is due by Tuesday, February 13. By that point in the semester you should have located most of the materials you will be using. You will present and defend your proposal in class. The draft paper is due on Thursday, March 29. Research presentation will begin on Thursday, April 5. The final version of the paper is due on Thursday, April 19. Please plan well in advance, work hard, and complete your paper on time. Late paper will be graded down one full letter grade for each day that it is late.

Due to the intensive nature of this course, regular attendance and participation in class is required. A class sign-up sheet will be distributed at the beginning of each class. You must come to every class on time and remain active until the end of the class. You are allowed a maximum of two unexcused absences during the semester; additional absences, unless you can clearly prove personal emergencies or illnesses, will result in the loss of 2 points each additional time. This course will only work successfully if everyone attends class regularly, comes prepared, and participates in discussion. The readings are designed to provoke, and discussion will focus on the readings and relevant academic issues. Contributions to seminar discussion should be informed by the assigned material, although you are of course encouraged to bring to discussion knowledge, ideas, and opinions you have acquired outside the class. It is also essential that students tolerate competing views and treat each other with respect.

Any student with a diagnosed learning or psychological disability which impedes your carrying out required course work, or which requires special accommodations, should advise me during the first two weeks of the course so we can review possible arrangements for reasonable accommodations.

Academic honesty is very important! When you enrolled in the College of Charleston, you signed the Honor Code. I expect you to abide to the code and it is the only way to maintain the integrity and value of your degree. You will fail this course if you have found to have cheated on an exam or plagiarized any portion of your paper. I will turn the case of Honor Code violation to the Honor Board and vigorously pursue further disciplinary action. Everyone must highly value academic integrity and abide to the Honor Code.

POLI 361: Critical Review Paper Assignment

This assignment provides you with an opportunity to (a) enhance your ability to evaluate the key perspectives on a critical issue of U.S. foreign policy and develop a position of your own, (b) use a variety of sources as evidence in support of an argument, and (c) further develop your effective writing skills.

You can choose one of the following controversial issues. You should start with the reading for your topic and summarize the key arguments. After a critical evaluation of the competing perspectives, you must develop your own position on the issue under review. Beyond the materials for this class, you need to use at least six additional library sources. All papers must include a complete list of references in a standard format. Please make sure that you give full credit to the authors of source materials. For your references and citations, please carefully study and follow the “Department of Political Science Citation Guide” (available at http://polisci.cofc.edu).

Please select your topic no later than Thursday, January 18, 2017. No more than two people can have the same topic. The paper should be typed, double spaced, between 5-7 pages. The paper is due on Tuesday, February 6, 2018.

1. Differences between the Realists and the Liberals (Mansbach and Taylor, p. 14)
2. Partisanship and U.S. Foreign Policy (Mansbach and Taylor, p. 41)

Participation Report Assignment

Spring 2018

Active class participation by everyone is very important for the success of our class. The participation report is designed to encourage you to actively and constructively contribute to our joint academic endeavor. You are required to submit two written reports. The first report is due on Thursday, February 22. The second report is due on Tuesday, April 17. Please limit each report to a total of five to eight pages. The participation report is a summary of your contribution to the class. Please include the following in your report:

1. Comments and questions about the required readings;

2. A summary of your comments and questions in class;

3. Concise discussion of relevant academic issues and current events;

4. Additional readings that you have done for the class;

5. Additional comments and suggestions about the class;

6. Anything else that is significant for the progress of our class.

7. Do you have perfect attendance? If not, why?

8. What are the strengths and weaknesses of our textbooks? Please comment on all main textbooks that you have read. Please answer this question in more details in your second participation report.

9. What is the most interesting journal article beyond our required readings that you have read for the class? Please feel free to examine any scholarly work that you find most interesting and significant for your study. Please limit this section of your paper to three pages.

10. An objective of your second report is for you to review your course experience. You can carefully examine your main objectives, progress, and future work/study plan for this class. Please limit this section of your report to three pages.
