GLOBAL OUTREACH

For 20 years now, Guoli Liu has been inspiring students at the College of Charleston to learn more about the world through political science courses on China, Russia and world politics. To learn more about his unique passion for teaching and research, as well as the other aspects of his life, check out the interesting Q and A here.

GRADS ON THE GO

Since graduating, Kelsi Ward ’10 has been on the go. She spent two years in the Peace Corps in rural Peru, and then came back to the States. She currently works in Washington, D.C., at the U.S. Department of State as a program specialist in the Cultural Programs Division of the Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs. Kelsi helps support public diplomacy and U.S. foreign policy through cultural exchange programs in the arts. Read more about her experiences.

FACULTY SPOTLIGHT

The department is pleased to welcome its newest members, LaTasha Chaffin (top photo) and Matthew Nowlin (bottom photo). Chaffin’s research focuses on U.S. public policy and how bureaucratic outcomes impact diverse and vulnerable populations. Nowlin focuses his teaching and research on environmental policy and research methods. Learn more about them here.
