Course Description

Global Political Thought is another way of saying non-Western Political Thought. This is something that gets short shrift in much of Political Science. We start with the assumption that there is indeed something called “The West.” But once we travel out of this geographical and historical space, can we say that political thought changes according to how the “Non-West” defines itself? Or does it change according to how “The West” defines, elevates, or dismisses it based on similarity or difference? Or does it change at all? Do culture and historical context matter? These questions matter because they compel Political Science to consider how to better construct and categorize its ideas about politics across time and space.

To get at these questions, this course sits at the intersection of Political Theory and Comparative Politics. We will look closely at a range of scholarly works by non-Western thinkers in order to challenge some central political ideas of the so-called Western Canon. Much of this “Global” literature grows directly out of the reactions to Westernization of the non-Western world from around the 19th century to present. These reactions were quite critical, and certainly not trivial. At the same time, this literature allows us to examine a range of perennial political issues from a variety of non-Western perspectives. We can compare them to see if we can draw some generalizations about how politics works across different modes of political thought.

In other words, we will use this class to examine whether or not our default setting for political thought – Western political thought – is universal. Or do alternative modes of political thought have their own distinct logic derived from different contexts? We may also ask whether or not the whole intellectual exercise of distinguishing categories of Western and non-Western Political Thought, not to mention using fancy Western words like epistemology (the study of knowledge), and ontology (the study of being and the relations of things) are fundamentally Western academic constructs, and whether or not any of this matters to understanding how politics works.
Course Objectives and Methodology
Students should come away able to:

- Demonstrate understanding of readings, analyze texts critically, effectively write papers, increase the quality of student’s reading, writing, debate and critical thinking skills
- Improve student’s understanding of how different theories define and approach the issue of development
- Distinguish their own views from those of others and can defend their own perspective

Course Requirements
Evaluation will be based on the following exercises:

- Essay: “Why does the study of Global Political Thought Matter?” (5%) due January 18

- Critical Review Essays (45% of grade). For each major part of the course, students will write a 2,000-word thought essay. These essays must demonstrate comprehension of the text and the ability to explicate the text. Above all the essays should critically analyze and unify the central arguments of the books and companion pieces for that particular part of the course. They will be progressively weighted throughout the semester (10%, 15%, 20%). Students will choose any three of the four weeks when essays due, which are on the following dates:
  - February 10
  - March 15
  - March 31
  - April 21

  Essays must be uploaded to OAKS no later than midnight on these dates.

- Final Essay (30%). Students will have an opportunity to tie together the arc of the course in a final, unifying essay that should reflect an “accumulated wisdom” of the semester. This Final Essay will be 2,000 words and is due Monday, May 2 @ 3pm.

- Leading a Discussion (10%). Each Thursday, a pair of students will prepare a 10-minute presentation on the week’s readings and lead a class discussion. These presentations should include a concise summary, a critical analysis, and discussion questions for the rest of the class. Pairs and presentation days will be established according to the size of the class.

- Class Participation (10%). The quality of this class depends on the quality of discussion therefore students are expected to participate in class.

Course Policies

Communication. This is in-person course. In the event that we shift online, it will be a synchronous course, which can be crowded on a screen. Students are strongly encouraged to direct any substantive comments and questions about the course content to the discussion board in order to encourage the development of an online community.

All inquiries to me should be made via email, and I will make every effort to respond to emails promptly. Students can expect replies within 24 hours for messages received between 9am and 5pm on Monday through Friday. I generally do not respond to emails on weekends. Students are also encouraged to arrange a Zoom appointment with me anytime they would like during the week to discuss anything they would like.

Community Standards. You are sharing the experience of working through important issues with other people – not just usernames on a discussion board. Please bear this in mind when engaging with each other and be thoughtful in your contributions and generous in your interpretations.

Netiquette. Please bear in mind that online communication precludes many of the non-verbal cues that normally facilitate face-to-face communication. This being the case, it is important to err on the side of generous interpretation and civility. What was written as a simple statement can easily come across as aggressive or argumentative. Submission of Work. Students are expected to submit their work on the day it is due. In the event that students cannot submit work on time because of Life Circumstances, they must inform the professor at least 24 hours beforehand, and provide a concrete date for submission. After this date, work will not be accepted. Also, please note that “My computer crashed” = “My dog ate my homework”.

Honor Code and Academic Integrity. Lying, cheating, attempted cheating, and plagiarism are violations of our Honor Code that, when suspected, are investigated. Each incident will be examined to determine the degree of deception involved.

Incidents where the instructor determines the student’s actions are related more to misunderstanding and confusion will be handled by the instructor. The instructor designs an intervention or assigns a grade reduction to help prevent the student from repeating the error. The response is recorded on a form and signed both by the instructor and the student. It is forwarded to the Office of the Dean of Students and placed in the student’s file.

Cases of suspected academic dishonesty will be reported directly by the instructor and/or others having knowledge of the incident to the Dean of Students. A student found responsible by the Honor Board for academic dishonesty will receive an XXF in the course, indicating failure of the course due to academic dishonesty. This status indicator will appear on the student’s transcript for two years after which the student may petition for the XX to be expunged. The F is permanent.
Students can find the complete Honor Code and all related processes in the Student Handbook at: https://deanofstudents.cofc.edu/honor-system/studenthandbook/student-handbook-2020-2021-8.27.20.pdf

Accommodations for students with disabilities. Any student eligible for and needing accommodations because of a disability is requested to speak with the professor during the first two weeks of class or as soon as the student has been approved for services so that reasonable accommodations can be arranged.

OAKS. OAKS will be used for this course throughout the semester to provide the syllabus and class materials and grades for each assignment, which will be regularly posted.

Inclement Weather, Pandemic or Substantial Interruption of Instruction. If in-person classes are suspended, faculty will announce to their students a detailed plan for a change in modality to ensure the continuity of learning. All students must have access to a computer equipped with a web camera, microphone, and Internet access. Resources are available to provide students with these essential tools.

Center for Student Learning: The Center for Student Learning’s (CSL) academic support services provide assistance in study strategies, speaking & writing skills, and course content. Services include tutoring, Supplemental Instruction, study skills appointments, and workshops. Students of all abilities have become more successful using these programs throughout their academic career and the services are available to you at no additional cost. For more information regarding these services please visit the CSL website at http://csl.cofc.edu or call (843) 953-5635.

Mental & Physical Wellbeing: At the college, we take every students’ mental and physical wellbeing seriously. If you find yourself experiencing physical illnesses, please reach out to student health services (843.953.5520). And if you find yourself experiencing any mental health challenges (for example, anxiety, depression, stressful life events, sleep deprivation, and/or loneliness/homesickness) please consider contacting either the Counseling Center (professional counselors at http://counseling.cofc.edu or 843.953.5640 3rd Robert Scott Small Building) or the Students 4 Support (certified volunteers through texting "4support" to 839863, visit http://counseling.cofc.edu/ct/index.php, or meet with them in person 3rd Floor Stern Center). These services are there for you to help you cope with difficulties you may be experiencing and to maintain optimal physical and mental health.

Food & Housing Resources: Many CofC students report experiencing food and housing insecurity. If you are facing challenges in securing food (such as not being able to afford groceries or get sufficient food to eat every day) and housing (such as lacking a safe and stable place to live), please contact the Dean of Students for support (http://studentaffairs.cofc.edu/about/salt.php). Also, you can go to http://studentaffairs.cofc.edu/student-food-housing-insecurity/index.php to learn about food and housing assistance that is available to you. In addition, there are several resources on and off campus to help. You can visit the Cougar Pantry in the Stern Center (2nd floor), a student-run food pantry that provides dry-goods and hygiene products at no charge to any student in need. Please also consider reaching out to Professor ABC if you are comfortable in doing so.

Inclusion: The College of Charleston offers many resources for LGBTQ+ students, faculty and staff along with their allies.
